STUDENT RESEARCH PANELISTS

Ambar Hernandez Negrete is a Ph.D. student in the School of Education. Her research focuses on examining the nuances in race-conscious and race-neutral policy approaches in addressing the racial inequities experienced by historically underserved students of color.

Jennifer Rodriguez is majoring in Sociology & Chicana/o Studies. She is from Richmond, CA. Jennifer's research focuses on the experiences of children of immigrants. Jennifer chose this topic because as a daughter of immigrants she acknowledges the relevance of documenting children's lived experiences.

Liliana Estrada grew up in Napa Valley in a mixed status family of farmworkers. Liliana graduated from UC Davis with B.A. in Psychology and Chicana/o Studies. Liana's research focuses on the experiences of Mexican migrant workers in California to deconstruct anti-immigration perceptions of them.

Enrique Lopez is a 3rd year Sociology Organization Studies Mayor at UC Davis. His project aims to explore the stigma placed upon the mental health of undocumented youth as well as outline its origins.

Kimberly Galindo-Diaz is graduating with a major in Chicana Studies and minor in Native American Studies. Her research focuses on honoring stories of undocumented students. She chose this topic based on her own lived experiences and her interest for conducting research "made by us and for us".

SPOKEN WORD

Alejandro Espinoza, pursues an M.A. in Chicana/o Studies, SJSU. He is a Community Engagement Fellow at Immigrants Rising where he supports undocumented high school students pursue higher education.
